What Animation Designers Do

It's an animation designer's job to take the script and the director's vision and bring characters to life. They're artists, but instead of using paintbrushes, they use characters to tell a visual story. Depending on the quality of the animation, the audience may need to remember that it isn't a living, breathing person but a digital puppet. It is not uncommon for animators to perform as acrobats, comedians, and actors simultaneously! For movies, TV shows, games, and advertisements, they create dynamic and exciting character performances. If you have an idea for animation designing, please take a look at our past, and current projects in our services and feel free to discuss your idea with us.
